Projectile Motion: Finding the Optimal Launch Angle

$gt^2 + v \sin \theta t + h$. (2) We now have a set of parametric equations for the motion of the projectile as a function of t , but to maximize the projectile's horizontal distance, we want to find a path function, p , that defines the projectile's height as a function of horizontal distance, x . Solving for t in (1) and substituting into (2) yields $t \dots$
